CANALSAT RECEIVER REACTIVATION

CanalSat broadcasts reactivation codes throughout each month for all valid access cards. The transmissions are most frequent during the first three days of the month. Airborne TV systems can have more than one CanalSat receiver, and the access cards in the receivers are not the same. That is why on an aircraft with multiple CanalSat receivers, some, none or all of them can be working.

The satellite signal strength in the European region is much less than that in the U.S. region. Degradation or loss of signal may be caused by adverse weather or aircraft location (at the edge or outside of the European service footprint). All of these factors can interfere with CanalSat reactivation.

➤ Is a "hit" required?

1. Make sure that the aircraft is within the European footprint with favorable weather conditions.
2. Make sure that the antenna has a clear line of sight to the CanalSat satellite.
3. Route the first European receiver video output to a cabin monitor.
4. Tune the receiver to channel 1, "TF 1"
5. If the receiver is not active, the cabin monitor should display an error message.

➤ Obtain a "hit"

1. In preparation for a hit, make sure that the aircraft is within the European footprint with favorable weather conditions.
2. Power up the TV system and initialize the aircraft's altitude reference system.
3. Make sure that the antenna has a clear line of sight to the CanalSat satellite.
4. Route the first European receiver video output to a cabin monitor.
5. Tune the receiver to channel 1, "TF 1". The cabin monitor should display a message banner that says you do not have rights to the program.
6. Repeat steps 4 and 5 for each inactive European receiver installed on the aircraft.
